

Gorka Bastarrika

He earned his degree in Medicine and Surgery and his PhD in Medicine from the University of Navarra, where he also completed his residency in Radiology at the University of Navarra Clinic.

He completed his training in cardiothoracic imaging at internationally renowned hospitals such as Klinikum Grosshadern and St. Johannes Hospital in Germany, and the Royal Brompton Hospital in London.

He later undertook a fellowship in cardiovascular research at the Medical University of South Carolina. He worked in the thoracic radiology section and served as Director of the Cardiac Imaging Unit at the University of Navarra Clinic.

After being appointed Associate Professor at the University of Toronto, he has carried out his professional activity as Head of the cardiac magnetic resonance (CMR) section in the cardiothoracic imaging unit of the Department of Medical Imaging at Sunnybrook Health Sciences Centre in Toronto, Canada.

He is currently Co-Director of the Department of Radiology at the University of Navarra Clinic and Full Professor at the University of Navarra.